"The Evil Inside Her" is the perfect date night horror film with engaging characters and a chilling setting located in Western North Carolina. When Clayton (Eric Roberts) chooses unsuspecting victim Vikki (Melissa Kunnap) to inflict horrible violence against those closest to her, her friends must decide to either save her or fight for their lives. "Bringing to life a story that puts a strong female lead at the center of the film's conflict with one of the most prolific and resilient character actors in cinema was one of my main goals in acting as the Executive Producer. It truly is a beautiful moment not only for myself but for women in film," states Jennifer L. Ray.

Eric Roberts is a Golden Globe and Academy Award Nominee with more than 400 credits, including Raggedy Man (1981), The Pope of Greenwich Village (1984), National Security (2003), The Dark Knight (2008), and Inherent Vice (2014). "I live for playing bad guys," Eric states, "But I don't play my characters as bad guys because they don't see themselves like that. If they have to do something wrong, it's because they have an important reason to do it."

As the production company behind the movie, SuttleFilm's core mission is to create narrative feature film content that entertains and engages the audience in addition to empowering new & established storytellers.
